

Protecting Salmon Habitat in Nookachamps Watershed

Protecting salmon habitat motivates many of the conservation projects we undertake at Skagit Land Trust (SLT or the Trust). Our recent purchase of 15 new acres for our East Fork Nookachamps Conservation Area is no exception. This diverse wetland just east of the Barney Lake Conservation Area contributes to a major tributary that provides habitat for Chinook, coho, and chum salmon. A population of steelhead trout also relies on these waters to wend their way home.

"The property's wetlands are an integral part of Nookachamps Creek and very fishy, serving as habitat and a food source," says Skagit Land Trust's Conservation Project Manager Kari Odden, "I think that our conservation partners were just as excited about this property's protection as SLT!"

The new conservation area features 850 feet of creek shoreline and nearly nine acres of year-round wetlands that stretch like a lifeline alongside Nookachamps Creek. The remaining property is lush, forested uplands, adding even more richness to the landscape. The forested shoreline is shady, with many insects and lots of decaying wood that support salmon on their journey.

A recent assessment by Upper Skagit Indian Tribe and Skagit County Public Works confirms that this area is productive for salmon and a key piece of functioning floodplain. The report notes that the valley floor once may have been a large wetland without a single, permanent channel. Even today, the creek runs freely across this property during highwater events.

"Upper Skagit Indian Tribe has identified the floodplain wetlands where Turner Creek and East Fork Nookachamps Creek converge as high priority for salmon," explains Rick Hartson, the Upper Skagit Indian Tribe's Habitat Services Manager. "Skagit Land Trust's acquisition preserves some of the best existing habitat in this area and helps maintain options for reach-scale restoration."

Executive Director's Letter

Dear Members and Partners,

In the United States, we lose about 150 acres of natural land and 40 acres of farmland every hour -- the equivalent of Olympic National Park and most of Yosemite every year. Once it's gone, we can't get it back. To make progress we must focus and plan.

Every five years we update our Strategic Direction to clarify goals and guide our work. In addition to our core mission, this plan identifies ways to meet evolving ecosystem and community needs. Here are a few goals from our 2025-2030 Strategic Plan:

1. Act Now for a Climate-Resilient Future

Protect and restore climate-smart lands that will thrive for generations. Plant climate-resilient forests. Restore lands with an evolving climate in mind. Educate. Get people involved.

2. Protect Corridors for Wildlife

To thrive, wildlife needs interconnected lands. We want to protect the connected landscapes that will sustain species. By linking forests, farms, rivers, and conservation lands, we'll also preserve options on how these lands add to ecosystem needs, and economic and community values.

3. Stewardship: Caring for Land, Together

Protecting land is just the beginning -- caring for it is forever. We're inviting our community to see stewardship as an investment in healthy ecosystems, engaged communities, and enduring beauty. We'll continue to build the long-term support needed to keep these lands thriving.

4. Conservation and Agriculture, Working Hand-in-Hand

Farms and conservation can grow together. Our innovative agricultural conservation easements give farmers the flexibility to adapt to changing conditions while protecting soil, water and habitat. We need lands far into the future that provide food and fiber and support ecosystems.

5. Shaping Policy for Lasting Impact

Conservation doesn't stop at the fence line. By helping shape public policy, we can multiply the benefits of planning decisions for all generations. From advancing green spaces and trails that link our communities to advocating for planning using best available science and local knowledge including climate impacts, we'll help advance plans and decisions that match our environment and community needs.

6. Public Access that Protects Nature First

We know people love connecting with nature. That's why we're designing public access carefully -- with wildlife and ecosystem health as the top priority. Our focus: family-friendly trails, especially near population centers, clear education on responsible use, and partnerships.

7. Expanding Our Circle of Community

Conservation is for everyone. We're broadening our outreach by providing resources in Spanish, engaging outdoor sporting communities, expanding partnerships, and deepening youth involvement through schools, internships, and volunteer opportunities.

With your help, together, we'll ensure conservation reflects -- and benefits -- the full diversity of the Skagit.

SLT staff Max Morange visits to begin making a management plan.

Our partners at Skagit Fisheries Enhancement Group (SFE) are also excited about this property's protection. It complements their salmon habitat restoration work upstream, where they have been removing fish blockages and replanting native species along Kennedy Creek, a small tributary feeding into the Nookachamps.

"We are working with landowners and tribal and county partners to enhance habitat for salmon, trout, lamprey, and all the other aquatic and wetland species that use this area," says SFE's Project Lead, Yuki Reiss. "The purchase of this property by Skagit Land Trust expands our potential restoration footprint on the East Fork Nookachamps."

The purchase of this conservation area was made possible thanks to the support of our members, Washington State's Salmon Recovery Funding Board, and Skagit Watershed Council partners. Special thanks to Skagit Fisheries Enhancement Group for connecting us with the landowners when they expressed interest in conservation.

The Nookachamps Wildlife Corridor runs from the Skagit River to southern Big Lake and beyond. Together, we've strengthened this corridor by creating a more resilient, interconnected landscape for wildlife to thrive. Thank you for helping us to keep this beautiful corner of the Skagit healthy for all who call it home.

Annual Report -- Fiscal Year 2024 - 2025

Thanks to the support from you and other members, volunteers, landowners, and partners of many kinds, we have been able to protect more than 11,000 acres and 49 miles of shoreline since Skagit Land Trust (SLT or the Trust) was founded. We have assisted in protecting thousands of acres more.

You helped the Trust finish another great year of conservation, stewardship, and community building. Following are some highlights from a deeply rewarding year.

Skagit Land Trust members supporting the Trust at our Lands We Love Social and Fundraiser.

CONSERVING LAND

Spring 2024: SLT expanded our Samish Island Conservation Area by adding a small but valuable piece of shoreline habitat. The new addition brought the total protected land on the approach and entrance to Samish Island to 171 acres.

Fall 2024: On the Cascade River near Marblemount, we purchased seven acres. This property protects 285 feet of the river and 450 feet of Lyric Creek. These are both salmon-bearing. With this addition, SLT now protects 241 acres along the Cascade River, complementing other conserved lands in this Wild and Scenic River system.

Winter 2024-25: Working with a local landowner, a permanent Conservation Easement in the Birdsvew area was donated to SLT, safeguarding another 122 acres of forests, fields, and farmland. These and other lands, together, function as a critical wildlife corridor. This landscape connects the Skagit River with surrounding uplands, giving elk, cougars, bears, and countless other species the space they need to move freely and adapt to changing conditions.

Winter 2024-25

Spring 2025

Spring 2025: SLT worked with landowners on Samish Bay who love their land and wanted to see all but their homesite protected. With federal grant assistance, we were able to purchase a Conservation Easement. This 128-acre property at the confluence of Edison Slough and Samish Bay is actively farmed for part of the year and then serves as bird habitat during the winter. It has 1.2 miles of marine shoreline. All these aspects are now protected under the Conservation Easement.

By conserving these lands together with thoughtful landowners, we are securing the rhythms of migration, farming, and natural processes that shape our communities and ways of life. Each conservation project is a stitch in the fabric of the Skagit, creating a landscape where nature and community can thrive side by side.

STEWARDING THE SKAGIT

This past year, SLT's Stewardship Committee, land stewards, staff, and volunteers provided thousands of hours of thoughtful care to the lands entrusted to us. Highlights include:

Worked in partnerships with multiple local organizations including WA Conservation Corps, AmeriCorps, Skagit Fisheries Enhancement Group and Skagit River System Cooperative to plant trees, manage invasive weeds, and restore natural features of Skagit Land Trust's conservation areas.

SLT and Skagit Fisheries Enhancement Group volunteers team up to plant native trees at Day Creek Forest in January 2025.

Samish Island Restoration leadership team discusses the project.

Completed Phase 1 of the Samish Island Restoration Project:

In partnership with Padilla Bay National Estuarine Research Reserve, we contracted Blue Coast Engineering to help us with the first phase of restoration planning. The goal of this project is to restore tidal wetlands to the site in a way that improves community resilience to coastal storms. Phase 1 broadly evaluated the feasibility of habitat restoration and identified the major ecological, structural and community resilience issues that will need to be studied and addressed in future project phases. The Phase 1 report can be found on Samish Island Conservation Area property page on the SLT website.

Hosted 28 work parties. 230 amazing work party volunteers dug out hundreds of pounds of invasive plants and planted 5,435 native trees, shrubs, and live stakes. Volunteers, land stewards, and work crews logged 2,230 hours caring for Trust lands.

Beyond planting and restoration work, there is the ongoing effort of addressing day-to-day stewardship challenges as they arise. From responding to incidents on our properties to removing abandoned vehicles, SLT staff worked on a wide range of issues and projects to ensure the lands we've protected with your help will remain healthy for generations to come.

CONNECTING OUR COMMUNITY

SLT's outreach programs created diverse, meaningful opportunities for over 2,250 community members of all ages to engage with nature, conservation, and each other:

167 volunteers contributed 1,365 hours to support our outreach events.

78 people participated in bird-related events at our Samish Island Conservation Area. Our Swanrises and Goodnight Swans at Barney Lake welcomed another 182 community members to celebrate the beauty of trumpeter swans.

Skagit Land Trust volunteer Libby Mills leads a birding walk at Samish Island Conservation Area.

Community members wait for trumpeter swans to take off from Barney Lake wetland.

SLT's Speaker Series drew over 175 participants, who gathered to learn from experts on the History of Environmental Change in Skagit County, Beavers in Washington State, and Hiking Close to Home.

15 community members monitored herons at our March Point Heronry, watching nests, recording when eggs were laid, and tracking chicks as they grew through the summer. Their observations told the story of a successful nesting year and gave us valuable information on local great blue herons.

SLT started a new partnership with Woodland Park Zoo. Through the Zoo's Amphibians of Washington project, volunteers gathered and logged egg mass data in iNaturalist. This data builds a statewide picture of biodiversity and gives us insight into the health of our wetlands.

We also connected with 2,000 youth through the following outreach programs:

- For the eighth year, SLT welcomed second-grade students to our Utopia Conservation Area for nature-oriented field trips.
- We coordinated six conservation-focused field trips for the Kulshan Creek Neighborhood Youth Program.
- We continued our work with Mount Vernon High School's AP Environmental Science students at Barney Lake, monitoring water quality.
- We added new field trips with the Mount Baker Boys & Girls Club and with Skagit Wild & Free, a local homeschool group.

Financial Report for April 2024-March 2025

Skagit Land Trust received a clean audit for our fiscal year ending March 31, 2025. The Trust's general operating and program expenses were $1,586,378. We also spent $1,255,117 to purchase conservation easements and land. The Trust received Charity Navigator's highest rating of four stars.

SLT's funding comes from diverse sources, which helps to provide financial stability and sustainability. About 50% of our income came from 1,500 member and supporter households and businesses. Funds to purchase land were assisted by state, federal and foundation grants. The stewardship program, which cares for SLT's lands, is partially funded by interest and dividends from reserves. Member donations also help fund this work.

Not accounted for in the numbers are conservation land and conservation easement donations and the value of volunteer time -- both of which are fundamental to our success.

Revenue: $3,010,748

Expenses: $2,841,495

Those We've Lost

Over the past year, the Trust lost some valued supporters, including board members, charter members, land donors, land stewards, longtime contributors, and members of our Cedar Legacy Circle. They worked with the Trust and many community partners to conserve special places across Skagit County. We honor these members for their efforts, which live on in the natural legacies they have protected for future generations.

Encouraging a Sense of Place in the Skagit

It has been a busy summer for Skagit Land Trust's Kulshan Creek Neighborhood Youth Program. Local youth and their families biked the Kulshan Trail to downtown Mount Vernon during the Tulip Festival, paddled Glacier Peak Institute canoes across Heart Lake (below left), set sail with the Salish Sea School on a naturalist-led boat trip (bottom right), and spent the night immersed in nature at North Cascades Institute's Mountain School (below right).

Through these field trips, SLT staff worked to build safe spaces for participants to step outside of their comfort zones and connect with nature in new ways. While canoeing at Heart Lake, some children seemed hesitant -- they had not been in a canoe before and were unsure about joining the adventure. Several kids felt the same way as they embarked on the 'big canoe' at Mountain School.

Staff were able to support participants as they braved these new experiences. Each trip offered more than just an adventure. They helped youth deepen their sense of place in the Skagit, encouraging a connection to local ecosystems, landscapes, and one another.

Through shared experiences outdoors, the Kulshan Creek Neighborhood Youth Program supports the next generation in becoming adults who care for the places where they live.

Improving Wildlife Habitat and Community Access

This summer, the Trust's stewardship team advanced several exciting projects:

- Phase Two of the Samish Island Restoration Project began. This phase includes undertaking detailed modeling to assess salt marsh restoration potential.
- Staff completed an accessibility audit of six of our trail networks. This audit lays the groundwork for clearer communications and other improvements that will make it easier for more people to explore the lands we protect.
- Planning began on an upgraded Land Steward Program that will better support volunteers who care for our properties.
- The Trust partnered with many conservation partners to plant trees, manage weeds, and sustain past restoration efforts.

Each of these projects and collaborations supports healthier habitats and deeper connections between people and places in the Skagit.

The lands conserved and protected by Skagit Land Trust have been inhabited and stewarded by numerous tribes and Indigenous peoples since time immemorial. We recognize and respect the inherent, indigenous, and treaty rights of the Coast Salish People who have deep and abiding connections to these places. We seek to partner with local tribes as we conserve and care for these lands and waters.
